Land Liminality Loss

Pam Patterson PhD, Assistant Professor TIS, Faculty of Art.

Canada's historical and contemporary crisis and the impact of related trauma on bodies result from an inherited colonial legacy. The construction is about power. Many who fled and/or were lured to Canada bear the trappings of the rewards they reaped from this place to which they migrated. But didn't the acquisition of privilege and power have something to do with why they left in the first place?
